These can be used to manage and control streaming sessions. One of these tools is called RTMP Control. It is a separate application that has been developed to address the needs and wants of users of streaming content. What is included in the package? RTMP Control can do two things: act as a streaming server and be used as a management system for this type of application. This means that it will receive information about the incoming stream, then it will control the process and end up delivering the content to the client. The core features are the following: - The ability to manage the streaming server effectively by loading files, displaying information or enabling or disabling settings. - The functionality of working directly from the file explorer, where there are the available options to manage the loaded content and both properties and get information about it. - The management capabilities of images, audio and videos to provide an interface for the viewer and in this way the user can choose if he wants to stream, download or pause the content. On the other side, the limitation of this program is that it is not used in conjunction with other streaming server related software, even though this is a bit more complicated. That is, if you are looking to create your own streaming setup the utilization of the mentioned program would be essential.
